AMERICAN OFFENSIVE AGAINST JAPAN

MacARTHUR'S TASK IN AUSTRALIA

WITH Japanese invasion forces pushing up into Central Burma and through New Guinea towards Port Moresby, which commands the 100 miles wide Torres Strait off Queensland's northern tip, Allied leaders have re-affirmed that the strategic aim in the Pacific is not only to hold the attackers, but to hit back.

General MacArthur's declaration that his task in Australia is the "organisation of an American offensive against Japan," and "a primary purpose" the relief of the Philippines, was quickly endorsed by Mr. Curtin, the Commonwealth Premier, who said:—"We will hold what we have, and will take back what we have lost. General MacArthur's gallant men in the Philippines will find Australia and its Allies advancing towards them."

General MacArthur arrived in Melbourne this morning.

President Roosevelt, when asked about General MacArthur's plans for an Australian offensive, said that everything possible was being done, but drew attention to the vast distances involved and problems created by world shipping shortage.

In Burma Japanese pressure to the North has been renewed. The main clash is undoubtedly near in the battle for the two main roads into Central Burma, but at the present stage Japan is still probing the Allied strength.—(Press Association and Reuter.)

"AUSTRALIA WILL BE HELD"

"We are going to hold Australia, there is no doubt about it," said Mr. R. G. Casey in Washington after his trip to the Pacific Coast to meet Dr. Evatt. "It will be a difficult job, but we shall do it."

Shortly after their arrival in Washington Dr. Evatt, Special Australian Envoy, and Mr. R. G. Casey, Australian Minister, had a short conference with President Roosevelt at the White House. Dr. Evatt said he would see the President again to-day.

Dr. Evatt later urged the creation of a Pacific War Council, with Australia and New Zealand represented on an equal footing with Britain and America.

In the Pacific theatre the democratic Powers had a great opportunity—probably the last one—of hurling back the Japanese, and by his appointment of General Macarthur President Roosevelt had initiated an offensive.

"The position is improving and our defences are improving," declared Mr. S. G. Holland, Opposition leader in the New Zealand House of Representatives. "I think the appointment of General Macarthur has given our morale a new impetus," he said. "I have greater confidence and more hope than I have had for some little time."—(Reuter.)

CARRYING WAR TO JAPAN

Lieutenant-General J. W. Stillwell, American Chief of Staff to Marshal Chiang Kai-shek, disclosing that he had been assigned to command all the United States forces in China, Burma and India, emphasised in Chungking "the determination of the American people to carry the war to Japan." "I want," he said, "to emphasise the determination of the American people to carry the war to Japan. The happiest days of our lives will be the day when we see American and Chinese troops in Tokyo together.

"I am unable to go into details as to what help and equipment is on the way, but you may assume from the fact that I am assigned to command the United States forces in China, Burma and India, the effort will be large."

A Reuter telegram early this morning from Washington says:—The exact bearing of the remark attributed to Lieut.-General Joseph Stilwell that he has been assigned to the command of all United States troops in China, India and Burma is not clear. So far as is known here, there are no American troops in either of the countries named to command.

ROAD TO MANDALAY

Chinese cavalry sweeping down the Mandalay road, have drawn first blood in the battle for Central Burma. Operating with British forces south of Pyu, 36 miles south of Toungoo, they charged a mixed force of 400 infantry and cavalry, supported by three armoured cars, according to Reuter's Special Correspondent. Disclosing for the first time the presence of Chinese cavalry in Burma, an Allied communiqué adds that, with British troops, they withdrew in good order to new positions after inflicting 100 casualties on the Japanese and destroying the armoured vehicles. Toungoo, which lies on the main eastern road to the north is about 160 miles from Rangoon.

A later communiqué, broadcast by New Delhi Radio, says that heavy fighting continues near Toungoo, and Japanese casualties have, so far, totalled 700.

On the Irrawaddy front, where the Japanese are trying to push the Allied forces back on Prome, a key point on the west road to the north, the main Japanese forces are shown by the communiqué to be still south of Taikkyi, 40 miles north of Rangoon. Japanese patrols, however, have appeared as far north as the little town of Letpadan, 40 miles further along the railway from Taikkyi. Toungoo remains the immediate objective of the chief Japanese thrust, which, after a lull of just over a week, raises the curtain on the second act in the battle for Burma. Fighting is raging beneath a blistering tropical sun, with tanks and armoured cars too hot to touch with the naked hand, and in a countryside of dusty, fried-up paddy fields.

OTHER FRONTS

A Canberra communiqué says that no clash has been reported yet between the Australian forces and the Japanese in the Nalamgua-Lae area, although Japanese activity is clearly extensive. Toyko claims that Japanese troops, reported earlier to be pushing through the jungle-lined valley of the River Markham, are "rapidly advancing towards Port Moresby after crossing the Moresby basin." American Flying Fortress bombers, in an attack on Japanese shipping in Rabaul Harbour, in New Britain, scored hits on a large cruiser.

Japanese air attacks have been directed against Port Moresby—twice yesterday—and against the Solomon Islands, with only slight damage at either point.

JAPANESE CRUISER HIT

WASHINGTON, Friday. — Two American Army heavy bombers of the Flying Fortress type atacked Japanese vessels in the harbour at Rabaul, New Britain Island, on March 18 and scored a direct hit on a large cruiser. The War Department announces this in a communiqué, which also gives a complete list of Army personnel who accompanied General MacArthur from the Philippines. The list consists of fourteen names.

A Tokyo despatch quoted in a broadcast by the Calais Radio, states that Japanese marines in Southern Celebes captured 1,000 prisoners, including 350 Dutch troops, and one Colonel.

Strong new reinforcements have been landed on the North Coast of New Guinea, German Radio said, quoting Japanese front reports.

The Radio also said that fifty-three vessels had been found sunk in the harbour at Sourabaya, Java.—(The Associated Press.)

NEW SEA WAR METHODS

TOKYO, Friday.—The Japanese are to revise their methods of sea warfare because "the enemy is employing illegal tactics in utter disregard of international law." The Cabinet was informed of this to-day, and it is stated that the Government have notified enemy countries through neutral Powers. Domei accuses Britain and America of "extreme warfare based on retaliation and hatred." The Japanese Navy "desires to take fair and just action respecting international law." Tokyo wireless said: "Since the enemy is employing illegal naval warfare tactics in utter disregard of international law, the Imperial Navy to-day promulgated an ordinance revising naval warfare regulations."—(Reuter.)

LIABILITY TO SERVE IN ENGLAND

IRISH TEST CASE

The hearing was continued, before the Lord Chief Justice (Lord Caldecote) and Justices Humphreys and Singleton, in a King's Bench (London) Divisional Court yesterday, of the cases in which five Irishmen—among them Michael Murray, of James street, Blaby, Leicester—were the appellants.

All had been held by magistrates to have disobeyed the orders of the Minister of Labour and National Service to undergo medical examination for service with the armed forces, and had been ordered to submit themselves for examination forthwith.

The case of Murray was argued as a test case. It was stated that he was born in Roscommon in 1908, and had lived in England since 1934. He claimed to have retained his Irish domicile, and contended that Eire was a neutral State, not subject to allegiance to the King, and consequently, as a citizen of Eire, he was not liable to be conscripted for military service.

The Minister of Labour's reply was that Eire had never seceded from the Commonwealth of Nations and was a British Dominion, and that, therefore, Murray was a British subject and liable to the common law of England.

Mr. Serjeant Sullivan, K.C., in his final speech for the appellant, said that he was a citizen of the Irish Free State in 1934, and when he come to England, with the intention of returning, he retained that citizenship. The fact that the Irish Free State had become Eire did not alter Murray's position as a citizen of that State.

Judgment was reserved.

REVELATIONS AT RIOM TRIAL

French tanks were in fine trim when the Germans attacked in the spring of 1940, and fought off the Germans with success, declared a reserve officer, Ragaine, at the Riom "war guilt" trial yesterday. This officer, who commanded the 35th Tank Battalion, said that the material at his disposal was "out of date when war broke out," but was progressively modernised, and gave all satisfaction when it went into action. When heavy German tanks attacked in Belgium in May, 1940, the attack was broken up, and they did not try again. They never succeeded in forcing the French lines in his sector.

General Sciard, who commanded an army corps during the war, said that morale was good in his division, but there was a considerable lack of anti-tank and A.-A. equipment. They had only 26 anti-tank guns, instead of the 60 provided for. "I conducted the offensive of May, 1940, with six Potez. By June 15 I had not a single 'plane capable of flying over my troops."

General Leuclud, who commanded a division that fought at Peronne, on the Somme, blamed "the revolutionary unrest of 1936 and 1937, which influenced the morale of the troops at that time," but in May and June, 1940, his men held magnificently, although they lacked such necessary equipment as blankets, boots and mess tins. "Above all," he said, "we must have been short of ammunition, for we received orders to fire as little as possible." Like other witnesses, he said that the lack of 'planes was the main cause of the moral depression in the Army.—(Reuter.)

MANUFACTURERS AND NEW CLOTHING ORDER

At a meeting of the officers of the Federation of Irish Manufacturers yesterday it was decided to call a special meeting of the Council to consider the recent Emergency Order drastically reducing the duties on all imported clothing.

It was learnt that the imposition of the Order came as a great shock to many branches of the clothing industry. It was decided to investigate the circumstances in which the Order was made. Mr. M. W. O'Reilly, President of the Federation, presided.

I don't mind being drilled and paraded
But resent my night's sleep being invaded,
When the order is 'Rest'
I do my darned best

FIERCE FIGHTING ROUND KHARKOV

RED ARMY CLOSING ON VYAZMA

MOSCOW, Friday.—The Russian armies on the Central front have almost completed the encirclement of the Rzhev-Vyazma pocket, while several hundred miles away fighting on the southern Kharkov front is becoming "fiercer and fiercer," according to Moscow Radio.

These are the main features of the picture presented by the long Russian battle-line, as Soviet artillery, dive-bombers, paratroops, and automatic riflemen, carried on fast air-propelled sledges, maintain their pressure against German key bases.

The Germans are fighting desperately around Vyazma in an attempt to check the closing of the Russian ring, but midway between the town and Gzhatsk the Red Army men have captured Sergoivanovskaya, and three other inhabited localities have fallen on other sectors further west in the Smolensk district.

All along the 1,500-mile front the Red Army forces are dealing serious blows, while they bend all their energies towards securing the best vantage ground from which to conduct their own spring offensive. The Germans are retreating under the weight of Marshal Timoshenko's attacks, and are employing infantry, artillery, tanks and 'planes in counter-attacks. The Russian advance, however, continues, and, says Red Star, the position of certain German units has become critical. For several hours they fought bitterly in an effort to break through, but the Soviet troops wore them down, counter-attacked, and then hurled them from the locality prepared in advance for a prolonged defence.

West of Moscow some Soviet units, says General Yeremenko, have driven through the German defences; advanced 160 miles; liberated six big towns and 2,500 inhabited localities; killed 17,000 Germans, and captured 1,200 tanks, 450,000 shells and enormous quantities of other weapons and equipment.—(Press Association and Reuter.)

FIELD-MARSHAL VON RUNDSTEDT

BERLIN, Friday.—After a short period of rest, General Field-Marshal Von Rundstedt is to-day again in charge of "a responsible post," under the Fuehrer's orders. This announcement was made in connection with his celebration to-day of the 50th anniversary of his entry into the army.—(Reuter.)

RUSSIANS REPORTED IN STARAYA RUSSA

NEW YORK, Friday.—A report that Russian forces had entered Staraya Russa was broadcast by Vichy Radio—heard here by the Columbia Broadcasting system—which added that the report had not been confirmed.—(Associated Press.)

GERMAN REPORTS

BERLIN, Friday.—Military circles claim that in recent attacks the first battalion of the 312th Soviet Rifle Regiment lost 486 of its total complement of 784 men. Heavy losses, it is added, were sustained by 1,000 reserve troops drafted from Antibichobo, in Siberia, to the 42nd Guards' Rifle Brigade on March 1. It is also claimed that in the Donetz area ten fully-laden goods trains were hit and four engines destroyed in attacks by Luftwaffe bombers.—(Reuter.)

The Russians are continuing their heavy attacks on the German-Rumanian lines in the Kerch Peninsula, south-east Crimea, German Radio said. After a heavy artillery duel the Russians launched an attack yesterday with 40 to 50 tanks and waves of 'planes. Throughout the day there was violent hand-to-hand fighting.

The Radio claimed that the attacks had been repulsed, and claimed also the destruction of 28 tanks, making a total of 200 Russian tanks destroyed on the Kerch Peninsula between March 13 and 19.—(Associated Press.)

SOVIET COMMUNIQUE

MOSCOW, Friday.—The Soviet communiqué states:—"During March 20 our troops on several sectors of the front waged offensive operations against the German Fascist troops, and inflicted heavy losses upon the enemy. On March 19, 37 German 'planes were destroyed. We lost 14 'planes on March 20, six German 'planes were brought down near Moscow."—(Reuter.)

CRIPPS'S TALKS IN NEW DELHI

The three main political organisations in India and seven individual leaders have so far been invited to meet Sir Stafford Cripps, says a Reuter message from New Delhi. The organisations are the Indian National Congress, the All-India Muslim League and the Hindu Mahasabha, and the Indian leaders are:—Sir Teg Bahadur Sapru, the Liberal leader; Mr. M. R. Jayakar; Mr. Fazlul Huq, former Premier of Bengal; Mr. Allah Baksh, Premier of Sind; Dr. B. R. Ambedkar, leader of the Untouchables; Mr. M. C. Rajah and N. M. Joshi. Congress and the Muslim League have been given the option of selecting a maximum of six represetnatives and the Mahasabha three.

The provisional date mentioned for Sir Stafford's meeting with the organisations' representatives is March 25, while the individual leaders will meet him next day.

DUBLIN GAS SUPPLY

By a notice in last night's Iris Oifigiuil the Alliance and Dublin Consumers' Gas Company intimate that between next Tuesday and 1st April there will be a reduction in the calorific value of the gas from 425 British thermal units gross per cubic foot to 300. After 1st April it will be increased from 300 to 400 British thermal units per gross cubic foot.

The reduction is caused by the impossibility of maintaining the calorific value of gas with the unsuitable coal now available for carbonisation. The maintenance of even 400 will depend on the company being able to procure adequate supplies of gas oil.

MR. CASEY'S POST

WASHINGTON, Friday.—In connection with the appointment of Mr. Casey, Australian Envoy in Washington, as a member of the British War Cabinet, Mr. Casey has issued the following statement:—"I do not believe it is in the public interest that I should discuss the various factors that led me to accept Mr. Churchill's proposal. I discussed the matter with all those who could bring a useful point of view to bear, and generally the accepted appointment was welcomed in the general interest. If I had thought that Australian interests would suffer I would not have considered the proposal for a moment. I regarded the matter solely from the point of view of my duty in respect to the conduct of the war in the interests of Australia and the Empire generally."—(Reuter.)

THE FIRST N B B L MENU

TO-DAY, as promised, we print the first NBBL menu for a complete day. This menu has been compiled by the dietetic advisers of the League, and provides a total value of approximately 2,700 calories, sufficient for those who neither lead strenuous lives nor do manual work. Ordinary bread has not been included, but, in accordance with the undertaking of League members, it may be used at any one of the four meals.

The meals are based on the time-table and requirements of an ordinary household, run on a moderate income, with a 2 p.m. dinner, light tea, and substantial supper at night. Future menus will be designed for those who dine late.

The figures in brackets represent the unit content of each dish. A unit, or calory, is the amount of energy (in terms of heat) required to raise a half-gallon of water 1 degree Centigrade. The normal daily calory requirements of a sedentary individual are approximately 3,000. Manual workers require 4,500 daily calories.

BREAKFAST—Baked apple (40) or porridge and milk (245); grilled or fried bacon or sausage (150); tea or coffee; potato yeast bread, and butter (350). Fish, kidney, tomatoes and mushrooms may be used to vary breakfast menus.

DINNER—Oxtail soup; ragout of rabbit or roast loin mutton (130); potatoes, vegetables (260); apple tart (potato pastry) with custard (150).

TEA—Hot potato tea cakes, with butter; potato biscuits (for tea cakes and biscuits, 400), tea.

SUPPER—Rissoles or baked beans and tomato sauce (100); carrot and potato salad (100); cheese fingers (potato pastry) (250); potato yeast bread, and butter (350).

These unit values are based on the amounts of each dish which an adult would normally eat at one meal. The food value is increased by the milk which would be added to the tea. Recipes for some of the potato dishes in this menu will be printed next week.

EXETER'S "DESPERATE" FIGHT

TOKYO, Friday. — The British cruiser Exeter, her gun turrets destroyed, "fought desperately" with her remaining guns until slowed down by a shell in the engineroom and finally struck by a torpedo fired at close range, according to a Japanese naval captain's description of the battle of the Java Sea.

Describing the sinking of the Exeter, he said that the vessel was first hit on the evening of February 27 and fell out of line. It was not until the morning of March 1, the narrator said, that a big cruiser, supported by two destroyers, appeared on the horizon. It was the Exeter, hastily repaired, coming to rejoin the enemy squadron, without knowing that it had been wiped out.

"When at the sight of the main Japanese squadron, the Exeter altered her course, she was already surrounded by another Japanese squadron which had come up, having heard of the battle which had taken place the day before.

"Concentrated fire was directed against the Exeter, while the two enemy destroyers spread a smoke screen. The Exeter fought desperately, but failed to score a hit on any Japanese vessel. The gun turrets of the Exeter were immediately destroyed, her remaining guns fired intermittently, but were soon silent, a shell in her engine-room caused her to slow down. A Japanese destroyer drew in close to the cruiser and fired a torpedo. The Exeter began to sink stern first, with a sharp list to port. Twenty minutes after the start of the battle she went down to the bottom.

"The British destroyer Encounter courageously shared the fate of the Exeter, while an American destroyer was sunk by a Japanese destroyer while it was trying to escape eastwards."

The Captain claimed that Japanese losses in the three-day battle were only one destroyer slightly damaged and one man wounded. He added, according to the Domei Agency, that one other man who worked without respite for many hours, died of sunstroke.—(Reuter.)

PRISON THREAT FOR NOT TILLING

"I propose where there is failure to till this year to make imprisonment orders in every case, and I think it better to let that be known in advance," said District Justice D. F. Gleeson at Ennis yesterday, when dealing with breaches of the tillage regulations. He added that no excuse would be taken for failure to till.

The following were fined for failure to till the required quotas:—£50, Thomas Lillis, Market square, Kilrush; £40, Stephen O'Dea, Henry street, Kilrush; £30, John Murphy, Cabermurphy, Kilmihill; £25 each, Michael Meehan, Clooney, Quin, and Martin Moroney, Burton street, Kilrush.

At Tralee yesterday Miss Hilda Blennerhassett, Ballyseedy, was fined £50, with £2 expenses and £1 costs, for not cultivating the required minimum of arable land in 1941.

NORTHERN MINISTER IN DUBLIN

The Right Hon. John Milne Barbour, Minister of Finance in Northern Ireland, has been paying a short visit to Dublin. He was present during the debate in the Senate on Thursday, where he was introduced by Senator Frank MacDermot. Later, in the Senator's room, he met Mr. Sean T. O'Kelly, Minister for Finance, with whom he conversed for some time.

The British Air Ministry yesterday stated:—

"A Sunderland flying boat of a Royal Australian Air Force Squadron of Coastal Command attacked a German naval patrol boat in the Bay of Biscay early this morning. The patrol boat was left sinking, and was abandoned by its crew."

MOTORISTS AND PETROL BAN EFFECTS

ANNOYANCE and dissatisfaction is growing among private motorists at the prospect of a black market in petrol receiving an impetus from the impending "ban," on private motoring.

There appears to be no doubt that virtually all the illicit petrol obtainable in the country is originally secured from stocks accumulated by owners of commercial vehicles, who find it possible to conduct their business on 80 per cent. of the allowance granted to them. It is felt that a reduction in the commercial allowances would make little difference to the position, having regard to the extraordinary price some motorists are prepared to pay.

Cut all allowances to lorry, van and tractor owners on the current month's quota by at least 25 per cent., and give the saved petrol to private owners, was the remedy suggested by a business-man motorist yesterday. "As far as we can hear," he said, "the termination of petrol supplies means only that legal motoring will discontinue, because the Moguls of the 'black market' are not, apparently, to be interfered with, and we can continue to motor if we pay about 10s. for a 2-gallon coupon, and then 2s. 11d. per gallon for the stuff. Of course, the price is bound to go up when petrol is stopped. We lack civic spirit very much, and few of us have the courage to report the racketeers to the authorities."

BASIC ALLOWANCES

Another business-man asked: "Does the Minister for Supplies really believe that all the motorists who were at Baldoyle last Tuesday, at Dalymount, Lansdowne road, Croke Park, or Ballsbridge, as well as the other race meetings, dog races, point-to-points, dances, theatres, etc., travelled to these fixtures and back on their basic allowances? Isn't it very much more than obvious that only about 50 to 60 per cent. of the petrol allowed to lorry and tractor owners is being used legitimately by them? I feel perfectly sure that if private owners' basic allowances were trebled there would not be one per cent. less mileage done by the lorries, vans and tractors."

Commenting on the intention to allow some motorists within the category of essential services, he said that he knew of a parish with an administrator, three curates and three priests of a secondary school staff, all of whom got a full clerical allowance, in spite of the fact that the teachers did not need a car for their work. "One car," he said, "should be sufficient for the duties of the parish, with an allowance of 20 gallons a month. Everyone knows of these anomalies, some more glaring than others."

MR. ERIC NEWTON IN DUBLIN

SUGGESTED EXHIBITION OF MODERN BRITISH ART

"I do think that a cultural understanding is the only effective understanding that can ignore natural frontiers and promote genuine international good-will" was the opinion expressed in an interview by the well-known English art critic, Mr. Eric Newton, on his arrival in Dublin last night to lecture to-morrow under the auspices of the Friends of the National Collection.

Mr. Newton expressed the opinion that some effort should be made to bring about a cultural understanding between this country and Great Britain. Pictures by Jack Yeats and Sir William Nicholson were at present on view in London. The name and literary work of James Joyce were known to every cultured Englishman, and Lady Gregory, Yeats and Synge were as much a part of the English heritage as that of Ireland. Why, then, Mr. Newton asked, could not an exhibition of the work of modern British artists be held in Dublin. "If I can come across by 'plane," he said, "so can pictures."

He wondered if there would be any prejudice, for instance, against an exhibition of war paintings. The war had provided British artists with a theme which made an instant and common appeal to the British public, and the Ministry of Information had been extraordinarily intelligent in selecting even the most abstract of peace-time artists, so that many of the resultant war pictures were highly imaginative, and not just photographic renderings of ruined buildings, or moonlight in the black-out. Such an artist as, for instance, Henry Moore, who before the war painted reclining women which might be mistaken by the uninitiated for a range of mountains, had done notably brilliant and imaginative work.

"I have been in Ireland before," concluded Mr. Newton, "but just at the moment I am savouring all the extraordinary delight of being in a neutral country. It is almost uncanny to sit down to dinner with the lights on and the curtains undrawn, and to get pancakes at the conclusion of the meal with a dash of lemon in just perfection."

COST OF FREEDOM AND NEUTRALITY

MR. MacENTEE ON AFTER-WAR CONDITIONS

A GLOOMY picture of the possibilities of conditions after the war was painted by the Minister for Local Government (Mr. Sean MacEntee), in University College, Dublin, last night, at the inaugural meeting of the Literary and Historical Society.

The Minister said that armed defence was a very expensive item in their economy, and was going to be much more expensive in the future.

If they were to remain free, they must devote a much greater part of their man-power and wealth to defence. This programme had to be paid for out of income, and largely by borrowing, and this borrowing would make it a charge on industry in the future.

It was extremely doubtful, said the Minister, that they would get after the war anything like present prices for exported live stock. This might mean the virtual extermination of the industry. This, in turn, would have repercussions on ports like Dublin and other towns. There would be a movement of town populations towards an already crowded agriculture, and the position of the agricultural community itself might become a matter of grave concern.

Mr. MacEntee, who was proposing a vote of thanks to the Auditor of the Society, Mr. F. Roe, B.A., for an address entitled "The Future in Ireland," said that it was not because of the Treaty of 1921 that this country was capable of remaining neutral, but because of the agreement of 1938, which rendered inoperative Articles 6 and 7 of that Treaty, the articles obliging this country to give harbour to British ships and take part in British defensive measures during a war.

Mr. Wm. Norton, T.D., seconding the motion, said that the partition of Ireland was due to British intervention and manipulation.

Regarding unemployment, the Government at present seemed to have as its only solution the export of thousands of young people to Britain.

If it paid other countries to back their note issues by the production of bombs and 'planes, it ought to be feasible for this country to back a note issue by productive works on the land and elsewhere. If they did not break with conservative policy in this regard the drain on their man-power was going to continue.

The right to remain neutral in this war, said Mr. Norton, was not due to any treaty, but was the right which the people of the country had got in their cradles. This right they must preserve at all costs. Neutrality was the only sensible policy in this war. Some of the countries who were asking us to go into the war had remained out of it themselves until they had been attacked.

Mr. J. M. Dillon (Independent), proposed "that the Literary and Historical Society was deserving of the support of the students and authorities of University College, Dublin." He said that Deputy Norton had relieved him of the responsibility of digging up Document No. 2. He begged them to read Document No. 2.

Mr. Dillon warned his hearers against youth movements. He never knew of a youth movement yet that was not started with the highest possible motives of giving the youth a chance of contributing to the public life of the country, but which did not end by being used by the most unscrupulous elements in the country for their own rotten ends, and never for the benefit or advantage of youth. If youth wanted to serve the country, they should enter politics and learn Statecraft from the bottom up.

Continuing, Mr. Dillon said that there were three personal aspects of partition, and one abstract one. The abstract one was hatred. The first personal one was bureaucracy in Northern Ireland, who wanted to maintain their jobs. The second was the ranting politicians of the North and South, who, whenever their political fortunes began to decline, picked the Northern people up like corpses and waved them until the people began to cheer again. The third enemy was the racketeers in the South, who wanted to suck the public under the protection of tariffs erected by the Fianna Fail Government.

Mr. Basil McGuckin, K.C., in seconding the motion, criticised the system of compulsory Irish, and spoke on the fruits of education.

Professor M. Tierney presided.

£562,723 LOAN FOR DUBLIN CORPORATION

The Dublin City Council, at a special meeting to be held next Tuesday, will consider a motion in regard to the issue of new Dublin Corporation 3½ per cent. redeemable stock, 1955-'80, to the amount of £562,723, at £98 10/- per cent., and bearing interest at the rate of 3½ per cent. per annum, payable half-yearly.

TURF PRODUCTION IN 1942

By advertisement in to-day's issue, Mr. Hugo Flinn, Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister for Finance, gives the plans which the Government propose to pursue in connection with the provision of fuel during the present year, and the steps they propose to take to avoid a shortage of fuel as a result of reduced coal imports. See Page 4.

FEWER HORSE-SHOES FOR EIRE

FARM work, the transport of turf, the work of creameries and the livelihood of Eire's 6,000 blacksmiths are seriously threatened by a severe shortage of horse-shoes. This, an Irish Times reporter learns, has been caused by the decision of the British authorities to allow the twenty-six counties only 250 tons of shoes this year, instead of the 2,000 tons which are necessary.

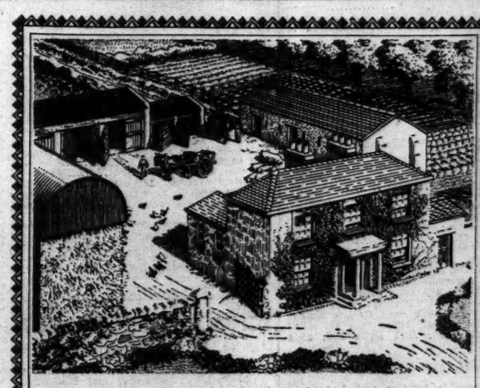

The position is further complicated by the fact that for some months past there have been no horse-shoe bars for the manufacture of shoes in the country, and farmers now have to rely entirely on what they can import.

Mr. M. Dalton, Eire representative of the British and Colonial Horse-Shoe and Machine Co., Ltd., Walsall, told a reporter that, unless the farm horses of this country had shoes, Irish farmers would find it impossible to do any ploughing during the coming spring, as 75 per cent. of the ploughing was done with horses. It would also be impossible to bring the milk from the farms to the creameries.

"All the turf," said Mr. Dalton, "is brought from the bogs to the roadside by horses and asses, and roughly 60 per cent of it is carried to the railway stations on horse-drawn vehicles. In a nutshell, if the farmer cannot get shoes for his horses, it will be nearly impossible to do any farm work in our country."

Within the past few months Mr. Dalton has received appeals for shoes from all over Ireland. He showed the appeals to our reporter. Single farmers and big firms alike point out how they will be affected.

A big co-operative society in Mitchelstown, Co. Cork, pointed out that last year they exported 1,000 tons of butter, 450 tons of packet cheese and 500,000 dozen eggs to Great Britain. They had a licence to export a similar quantity this year, but, unless they received horse-shoes, their farmer members would be unable to bring their milk to the creameries, or their eggs, poultry and swine to market. If this happened, they would not be in a position to carry on with their exports.

The Countryside

IN the heart of the countryside nestle the farmsteads and holdings which mean so much to us in these days of uncertainty. Here we are very close to nature and the fundamentals of life.

The lot of the farmer is a hard one and his work is never-ending. With him, first things must come first and the expenditure of every shilling requires careful consideration.

He must be sure of getting value for his money and that is why in countless isolated homes in our land the Policies of The Irish Assurance Company, Limited, are treasured possessions, and the Company's Representative a welcome visitor, for they mean security for the farmer and his family.

The Irish Assurance Company, Limited, can also help you to make the future secure for your dependants and yourself at the lowest cost combined with security. Our Representatives in every part of the country will gladly give you the benefit of their experience, or apply for particulars to:—

Cheltenham Programme

THE poorest National Hunt season on record closes to-day with the final stage of the Cheltenham festival and an interesting programme at Wetherby. The absence of Paladin and Savon has made the race for the Gold Cup more open, and the problem is further complicated by horses not being as fit as their trainers would wish owing to long spell of inactivity. Red Rower and Medoc II. gave impressive displays here last Saturday, but they have yet to show their ability to stay three miles, and the vote is for Roman Hackle, about whose stamina there is no doubt. Selections:—

1. 0—Staplegrove.
1.30—Queensland (nap).
2. 0—Roman Hackle.
2.30—Urambo.
3. 0—Post Horn.
3.30—Perfect Freedom.

SCHOOLS' SENIOR CUP SEMI-FINALS

CASTLEKNOCK ... 12 ST. MARY'S 0

Old Rivals, Castleknock and Blackrock, will meet in the final of the Schools' Senior Cup this day week. In the first semi-final, Castleknock beat St. Mary's by 2 goals (1 dropped) 1 try to nil, but they were not at all impressive in doing so. There was very little constructive Rugby throughout the seventy minutes, the scores being individual efforts. The losers had a well-trained pack, who had a very sound idea of getting the ball back from the scrums, but the backs were far too slow and incompetent to make much impression on the Castleknock defence. Johnston scored the try and converted it, and Mackesy dropped the goal.

BLACKROCK ...... 18 ROSCREA 0

It took Blackrock a long time to settle down against Mount St. Joseph's in the second semi-final, but in the closing minutes they played really brilliant football, and won by a penalty goal and five tries. Lack of match play told heavily against the hefty Roscrea team, but they tackled well against much cleverer opponents in the first half O'Brien, Carey and Burke (3) scored tries for Blackrock, and Mooney kicked the penalty goal.

KILCULLEN AND INGLE DEFEATED

BOTH the winner and runner-up in the Irish welter-weight championship were defeated at the Stadium last night, G. Kilcullen losing to T. Foran, while J. Ingle was outpointed by E. Chandler. In the championships a couple of weeks ago Kilcullen was put to the pin of his collar to beat Foran, so the latter was always in it with a chance, but Chandler's defeat of Ingle was a definite surprise.

This was the better fight of the two, for even though the work was scrappy at times the hitting was hard all the time. Ingle had the better of the earlier stages, but Chandler was doing far more scoring at close range, and had Ingle badly shaken in the fourth round. Kilcullen lost through his complete inability to attack. He let Foran carry the fight all the time until the last few seconds of the sixth round, and his counters were not sufficiently accurate to offset Foran's better work at long range.

Results:—
Fly-Weight—J. Foley (St. Andrew's) beat P. Purfield (Tramway) on points.
Bantam-Weight—Pte. T. Christy (Army and Arbour Hill) beat Pte. S. Tallon (Army) on points.
Feather-Weight—P. Glennon (Tramway) beat W. Ryan (Avona) on points.
Light-Weight—J. Connolly (Tramway) beat T. Reid (Phœnix) on points.
Welter-Weight—H. Kilcullen (Corinthians) beat Gunner Reilly (Army) on points; E. Carton (Whitehall) beat F. Somers (Tramway) on points; E. Chandler (Corinthians) beat J. Ingle (St. Andrew's) on points; T. Foran (St. Andrew's) beat G. Kilcullen (Corinthians) on points.
Middle-Weight—Cpl. M. Coffey (Army) beat C. Forde (St. Andrew's) on points.
Cruiser-Weight—Pte. O'Brien (Army) beat H. O'Hagan (Tramway) on points; Pte. Behan (Army) beat Pte. Fitzgerald (Army) on points.

STOCK MARKET REPORTS

DUBLIN EXCHANGE

In view of the prevailing uncertainty, coupled with week-end considerations, markets, apart from the Gilt-edged Section, presented a subdued appearance and the tendency was on the dull side.

Home Government Funds were quite busy, and the tone was steady to firm. 4 p.c. Conversion Loan rose to 108½, and 4 p.c. Exchequer Bonds gained 10/- at 109. Other issues closed just steady. 3½ p.c. War Loan eased the turn, but India 3½ p.c. Stock hardened to 100⅞.

Dublin Port and Docks 5 p.c. firmed up to 110½, and Dundalk 4 p.c. Loan advanced two points to 95. Banks were sellers in places, and Bank of Ireland Stock drooped to 307½, while Nationals eased to 35/6.

There was small selling of Guinness units in the afternoon, and they finished pence down at 85/6. Rails inclined lower, and Great Northern Ord. slipped back to 13¼, and Great Southern Gtd. gave way to 38, but the Deb rose to 59.

Dublin Transport Ord. were raised to 17/-, but the 5 p.c. 2nd Deb. relapsed three points to 103 on the possibility that this stock may be redeemed in the near future.

Switzer Pref. moved up to 18/-, and Central Hotel Ord. jumped 2/- to 10/-. Alliance Gas Ord. Clondalkin Paper Ord., Irish Times 1st Pref. and Goodbody Pref. were all buyers without effect.

Imperial Tobacco Ord. continued dull and relapsed a further 1/9 to 120/6. Imperial Chemical Ord. moved up to 32/3.

LONDON FEATURES

The main feature of the London Stock Markets yesterday was the rally in Tobacco shares, which had declined on Thursday on rumours of a cut in tobacco supplies. A further fall took place yesterday in the earlier dealings, but a denial of the rationing rumour had its effect later, and most issues finished better. Imperials, which at one time had fallen to 5¾, came back strongly, and were 6 1/16 at the close. "Bats" were 7½d. better on the day.

The imminence of the Budget had its effect on several groups. Gilt-edged showed fractional declines, and in the foreign market there was an easier tendency. British Rails continued to improve, and mostly showed rises. Some speculative interest in South American Rails, due to the recent satisfactory traffic, was responsible for a better tone, and there were a number of increases. "Canpac" continued to improve, and put on a further ⅛ at 10⅛.

Industrials were a fairly firm market on the whole, but there was some weakness in Breweries.

In the Mining Market one or two Kaffirs showed improvement, which was induced by a little buying from the Cape.

Among Oils, Anglo-Iranian were down 1/3 to 37/6, and the "Twin" Eagles lost ground.

OTHER EXCHANGES

MANCHESTER—Bleachers 4/-4/3, Dyers 7/9-8/3, "Slubbers" 4/-4/3, Calicoes 5/3-5/9, Coats 34/3-34/9, Courtaulds 31/9-32/-, Dunlops 24/9-25/3, Cottons 27/6-28/6, Velvet 3/9-4/3, Spinners 6/9-7/-, Henrys 8/9-9/3, Turner and Newall 64/-65/-; Wall Paper Def. 23/-23/6.

BIRMINGHAM.—Fords, at 24/3 and Austin Preferred, at 27/-, were both easier. John Harper rose to 49/-. Alvis, 3/-. COMPANY NEWS

Boulton and Paul.—Dividend of 5 p.c. (against nil).
Courage and Co.—Profits, £371,740 (against £368,192). Final 9 p.c. on the Ordinary, making 14 p.c. (Same.)
Davis and Timmins—Dividend 20 p.c., making 30 p.c. (same); net profit £44,844 (against £50,252).
Fortnum and Mason.—No Ordinary dividend for first time in company's history.

WALL STREET

NEW YORK, Friday.—The possibility of some Axis developments over the week-end, combined with persistent tax and other domestic problems, restrained buyers to-day. There was no urgency on the part of sellers, but, at the same time, bidding was very timid.

The turnover of 280,000 shares comprised 622 issues, of which 153 advanced, 300 declined and 169 remained unchanged. The close was easy.—(Reuter.)

IRISH BANKS' RATE (changed October 26, 1939), 3 p.c.; Loans on Government Stock transferred, 3½ p.c.; Deposits, 1 p.c. The foregoing rates are subject to variation.

LONDON MONEY MARKET

There was a further fall in applications at yesterday's Treasury Bill tender to the lowest figure recorded since August 23, 1940. It is believed that several of the usual outside tenderers did not participate at all, and, in consequence, the market syndicate obtained a quota of 50 p.c.

The clearing banks were pre-occupied with the heavy calls which will be made upon them next week, and only one was a buyer of bills on a moderate scale. The supply of credit was just adequate to the market's needs.

CONVALESCENT HOME, STILLORGAN

Owing to rising prices, an appeal for new subscribers was made at yesterday's annual meeting of Stillorgan Convalescent Home, held at No. 10 Leinster street, Dublin. Mr. C. H. Freeman presided.

The home, the first of its kind to be established in Ireland, was founded in 1862. No distinction is made of class or creed, but it is primarily intended for the care of working-class men and women after they have left hospital.

The eightieth annual report tendered thanks to the Dublin Hospitals' Sunday Fund and to the Dublin Corporation for most generous grants; subscribers and supporters were also thanked for their support, which had enabled the home to carry on its useful work.

DAMAGED BEEHIVES

"It was pure mischief, and showed poor supervision on the part of the parents," said District Justice Price yesterday at the Bray Children's Court, when four youths were charged with stealing beehive brood frames and honey value 30/- from a house in Delgany.

The owner stated that on his return to his house after an absence of some days he found one of his hives in a sandpit and another with the top off it, and the cushion and sacking to keep the bees warm thrown out. The bees in one hive were dead. While he found the Queen and a couple of hundred bees alive in another hive, some of them had become diseased owing to the wet.

Mr. Price directed the parents of the boys to pay £3. They were also directed to pay 5/- each, respectively, as compensation.

BLIND POET AND SINGER

A blind woman, aged eighty, author of nearly thirty songs and more than a hundred poems, has had one of her poems accepted by World Digest. She is Miss Jessy D. Joyce, who lives in the Molyneux Asylum, Leeson Park, Dublin, where an Irish Times woman representative visited her yesterday. "I am going to buy wool with the money and knit for the sailors," she told her. Miss Joyce, who still does her own typing on a little portable machine, has set her published work, "Spirit of Spring," to music, and it has been sung by inmates of the asylum. Another of her works, "An Appreciation for the National Institution for the Blind in London," was printed in the magazine for the blind, Progress. In spite of her blindness, Miss Joyce has led a varied life. Sixty-five years ago she sang in the Albert Hall, London. An accomplished needlewoman, she has done some beautiful wool work, knitting, embroidery, crochet and sewing. She still plays the piano, and sometimes at night accompanies the inmates in evening hymns.

"AN COSANTOIR"

A feature of this month's issue of An Cosantoir is two descriptions of a panzer attack—one by a young French officer who was engaged in the Battle of France, and another by a German officer, who fought in the same area at the same time. Both obviously are describing one action, and their different points of view make interesting reading, in view of what has since happened. All the regular features are included. Commandant C. E. McGoohan contributes some hints on rifle range practice, and a novel article entitled "Are You a Fifth Columnist?" by Vincent Walker, of the Rathmines District First Aid Group, will make some of those who think themselves models of patriotism think twice. L.D.F. and L.S.F. news, of course, is plentiful, and the issue, generally speaking, is well up to standard.

MISSIONARY'S WILL

The President of the High Court, Dublin, yesterday gave leave to Mr. Meredith Hardman, Ranelagh, Dublin, retired missionary and District Secretary for the China Inland Mission in Eire, to apply for letters of administration of the will of May 27, 1893, and a codicil, of Mrs. Jane Geraldine Augusta Blandford, late of Kuling, Province of Kiangsi, China, who died on January 3, 1940.

Mr. Garrett Gill (instructed by Messrs. T. W. Hardman and Sons), who appeared for Mr. Hardman, said that his client was acting under power of attorney from the executor named in the codicil. Mrs. Blandford and her husband had been missionaries in China for many years, and had carried on the North-West Kiengsi Mission. She left all her property to her husband, Edward John Blandford; and when she made the codicil the persons named in the will as executors were dead. The only alteration of the will made in the codicil was to appoint as sole executor Dr. Howard G. Barrie, Toronto, Canada.

The trouble was that the codicil did not contain any attestation clause; the witnesses to the will were dead; and the witnesses to the codicil were in Japanese-occupied China, and it was not possible to get in touch with them. The only assets which Mrs. Blandford had in this country was Bank of Ireland stock which had been valued at £732 odd, and it was desirable to have the stock changed into the name of Mr. Edward John Blandford, to whom it had been left. Dr. Barrie had, said Mr. Gill, been founder and head of the hospital at Kuling, where witnesses to the codicil still were resident.

PASSENGER INJURED ON A 'BUS

The danger to passengers standing up, especially in the new double decker 'buses, when the vehicles are turning corners was stressed by Judge Davitt in the Circuit Court yesterday in a case in which he awarded £100 and costs to Mrs. Catherine Byrne, of Connolly Gardens, Inchicore, for injuries sustained when she was a passenger in a 'bus. Her case was that she stood up to allow her mother to pass from an inside seat as the 'bus turned the corner at Suir road and Golden Bridge avenue. She was thrown across the 'bus. At the time she was in a delicate state of health. The 'bus driver, Francis Byrne, said that the 'bus turned the corner at normal speed of 7 to 10 miles an hour, and it came to a stop in the ordinary way.

Judge Davitt suggested that notices should be displayed on 'buses warning passengers against the danger of standing up when the vehicle was turning a corner.

Mr. P. McGilligan, T.D. (instructed by Messrs. James O'Connor and Co.) was for the D.U.T. Co., and Mr. John Farrell (instructed by David J. Delaney) for the plaintiff.

HIT BY SACK OF WHEAT

The President of the High Court yesterday made a rule of Court a consent to settlement of an action of Michael Downey, clerk and canvasser, Doyle's Cottages, John street, Limerick, against Michael O'Gorman, haulage contractor, Nenagh, claiming damages for injuries caused to Mr. Downey by a sack of wheat having fallen from Mr. O'Gorman's lorry and struck him while he was cycling at Dock road, Limerick, on October 1, 1940.

The terms of the settlement provided for the payment of £360 and a sum for costs to Mr. Downey.

Mr. Dermot C. O'Donovan was solicitor for Mr. Downey; and Mr. Sean Ryan, solicitor, of Messrs. James O'Connor and Co., appeared for Mr. O'Gorman.

£511 FOR FARMER

A settlement for £511, without admission of liability, and a sum for costs, was announced before the Master of the High Court, Dublin, yesterday, in an action of George Walker, farmer, Dromore, Mountcharles, claiming damages for injuries suffered when a motor car of Manus O'Boyle, Army captain, Mountcharles, was said to have struck him while he was motor cycling between Donegal and Mountcharles on September 25, 1940.

Mr. Francis Gallagher was solicitor for Mr. Walker; and Messrs. W. G. Bradley and Sons were solicitors for Captain O'Boyle.

LARCENY CHARGE DISMISSED

Company Quarter-master Sergeant Thomas Rourke, Brennan's terrace, Bray, was, at Bray District Court yesterady, ordered to pay £5 expenses to the State, and a charge of larceny of a pair of lady's grey fur-backed gloves, value 15/11, the property of Private Samuel Galloway, was dismissed under the Probation of Offenders Act. District Justice Price said that he had been influenced by the fact that Rourke had 20 years' service in the Army, and by his previous good conduct.

40 M.P.H. TOO MUCH

"Any person who drives a motor-car at 40 miles an hour in a built-in area, where people are liable to step off the footpath, is driving without reasonable consideration," said District Justice Burke in the Dublin District Court when fining Bernard F. Murphy, Cabra road, £2.

Evidence was given that Mary Lacy, aged 51, Tyrconnell road, Inchicore, was knocked down by Murphy's car and sustained serious injury on December 26 last. The defendant said that he was driving his car at 40 m.p.h. He saw a girl cross the road and applied his brakes, but a second girl crossed and was hit. The roadway was wet.

GOVERNMENT NOTICES.

TURF PRODUCTION IN THE SEASON 1942.

1. The Government wish to make known the policy which they intend to pursue in connection with the provision of fuel during 1942, and the steps which they propose to take to avert a shortage of fuel as a result of reduced coal imports.
2. It is intended that the following areas, and such other areas as may be prescribed from time to time, as circumstances may warrant, will receive their fuel requirements in the form of turf:—
the areas consisting of each of the following administrative counties—that is to say,
Carlow, Longford,
Cavan, Mayo,
Clare, Meath,
Donegal, Monaghan,
Galway, The North Riding of Tipperary,
Kerry, The South Riding of Tipperary;
Kildare, Offaly,
Leitrim, Roscommon,
Leix, Sligo,
Limerick, Westmeath;
the area consisting of the administrative county of Cork excluding:—
(a) the following District Electoral Divisions—namely, Blackrock, Bishopstown, St. Mary's, Lehenagh and Douglas, and
(b) the townlands of Rathpeacon and Carhoo in the District Electoral Division of Whitechurch, the townlands of Arderrow, Ballyharoon, Bandbff, Kilcully, Ballinamought East, Lahardane, Lota Beg and Lota More in the District Electoral Division of Rathcooney, and the Townland of Doughcloyne in the District Electoral Division of Inishkenny.
3. Coal may not be purchased, sold or delivered on sale for consumption in these areas except under permit, and it may be assumed that for domestic requirements the only fuel available will be turf or timber.
4. Subject to the terms of paragraph 6, below, the Government intend to encourage the production of turf by private individuals to the maximum possible extent, and a market will be found for all surplus turf of good quality offered for sale at a reasonable price by such private persons; with the exception, however, of turf produced in County Donegal; the (former) Rural Districts of Belmullet and Westport in County Mayo and the (former) Rural Districts of Galway, Clifden and Oughterard in County Galway. In these areas it is considered that no special encouragement is necessary in respect of production for local needs.
5. Certain bog areas in Counties Kildare and Offaly (viz., Lullymore Bog, Timahoe Bog and Mounds Bog) and in Counties Wicklow and Dublin (viz., Glencree Bog) have been taken up by the Government for the production of National turf for the common pool in non-turf areas. Subject to certain conditions, licences to cut turf in these areas in 1942 will be granted in approved cases to producers who exercised a right to cut turf in the same areas in 1941. A separate notice has been published in connection with these bogs. In the case of the Glencree Bog, applications for licences to cut turf thereon in the 1942 season by persons or bodies who have not previously operated there will be considered.
6. For the purposes of Emergency Powers (Restriction on Movement of Turf) (No. 2) Order, 1941, as amended, turf movement licences may be granted in approved cases, but only to applicants resident or with headquarters in non-turf areas; and only in the following circumstances:
(i) Where the turf in question has been produced directly by an individual applicant or group or association of applicants either by his/their own efforts or by labour brought from an area outside the turf areas as defined in the Order referred to above.
(ii) Where the turf in question has been produced by a licensed fuel merchant who has financed the cost of production.
NOTE: IN CASES (i) and (ii) ABOVE, APPLICATION FOR THE LICENCE MUST BE MADE, AND APPROVAL OBTAINED, BEFORE THE COMMENCEMENT OF PRODUCTION.
(iii) Where the turf in question is required by industrial firms for some particular process necessitating the use of turf.
(iv) Where the turf in question is required by firms or establishments for industrial purposes, provided that the quantity applied for is reasonable, having regard to normal fuel consumption and current stocks, and that the delivery of such fuel does not interfere with the transport of turf intended for the common pool in non-turf areas.
(v) Where the turf in question is intended for free distribution.
APPLICATIONS UNDER THIS PARAGRAPH SHOULD BE ADDRESSED TO THE OFFICE OF THE PARLIAMENTARY SECRETARY TO THE MINISTER FOR FINANCE, 21 FITZWILLIAM SQUARE, DUBLIN.
7. Producers of turf are warned that no guarantee can be given that transport facilities will be available in 1942.
8. The attention of producers is directed to the fact that no person shall carry on outside the scheduled turf area the business of selling turf, whether by wholesale or retail, unless he is a licensed fuel merchant or the sales thereof are solely to licensed fuel merchants, as provided in Article 5 of the Emergency Powers (Control of Fuel) Order, 1941.
9. The Government wish to stress the importance of having adequate quantities of turf produced in 1942 for the reason that there is no guarantee that even the existing limited imports of coal will continue. Preparations should, therefore, be put in hand now so that cutting may be commenced at an early date with the possibility of cutting and saving two crops in the season. Experience has shown that the saving of turf cut later in the season is extremely difficult.

Shannon and Farm

When, some sixteen years ago, the Siemens-Shuckert report on Shannon hydro-electric development moved Mr. Cosgrave's Administration to proceed with a scheme of national electrification, the country was presented with a picture in which the farmer's homestead would be lighted and heated, and his barn machinery operated, by current from Ardnacrusha. Official maps foretold networks of distributing mains to spread to villages and countrysides in every county, and tables of statistics, which told of other countries' advances in farm electrification, encouraged us to believe that the Shannon could, and would, put new instruments at the disposal of farmers in every Irish county. Now, despite the expenditure of £17,000,000, and the praiseworthy enterprise of the Electricity Supply Board, what is the position? The answer—summarised in our columns yesterday—was given on last Thursday night in the exhaustive analysis which Mr. J. C. Costello presented to the Irish Centre of the Institute of Electrical Engineers. Derived from wide and careful research, fully documented and eminently constructive in its critical suggestions, the answer, in effect, was that the Shannon scheme has proved to be an almost unmitigated failure in so far as agricultural interests are concerned. From the elaborate tables of comparative statistics presented a few selections will suffice to support that disheartening conclusion. Classifying all towns and villages whose populations exceed 1,500 as urban, Mr. Costello addressed himself to conditions in rural areas which contain 259,000 farmsteads. What did he find? In E.S.B. territory, 990 of every 1,000 farms still without electrical services, whereas the latest returns certify that the Danish, Dutch, Swedish and New Zealand electrified areas all have 90 per cent. of all farmsteads on their lists of electricity consumers. Even Great Britain, among the lowest on the international table, shows seven times the rate of advance yet reached in Southern Ireland! Comparisons of current consumed for all purposes—agricultural, industrial, and domestic—revealed the somewhat surprising facts that, despite the E.S.B.'s remarkable advances in city and town areas, our total consumption of current is 116 units per head of population, while the corresponding figures for Belgium are 630, New Zealand 621, and Great Britain 588 units per head.

When Mr. Costello turned from such depressing reflections to constructive proposals he entered—in 40 pages of typescript—into the discussion of technical problems which we hope will not escape close examination by the expert advisers of the Government and the E.S.B. Dealing with the economic aspects of what might be done, he advanced a plea that indirect, as well as immediate financial, results of rural electrification should be made the basis of future policy. In that connection he adduced figures and facts from experience in other countries which—so far as we can interpret them—seem to suggest that it would "pay" even to make the farming community a free gift of current and appliances for some limited number of years to come. Electrically dried fresh grass crops "can be used to replace such imported concentrates as cotton cake, oil cake, etc., for winter feeding," with a consequent saving of anything from one to two millions yearly! Mr. Costello, of course, advanced no such revolutionary suggestion. His plan is a step-by-step advance along a road not hedged about by demands for immediate profits, or by the strict canons of "commercial" finance. Caution was advised in a sentence which none will dispute when the lecturer pleaded for "full and far-seeing planning as the prelude to, and concomitant of, action." May we add a plea for wide economic and social research, of which the paper itself was within its necessary limits—an admirable example? Extended to include a survey of all the causes of increasing rural depopulation—to the farmstead's parlour and kitchen, not less than to its barn and cattle shed—adequate and thoroughgoing research well might reveal defects and possibilities even more surprising than those that were disclosed at last Thursday night's proceedings. The people of Dublin and other cities and towns owe much to the Shannon and its auxiliaries, and most of all to the farmer. Not only justice, but every consideration of prudence and self interest, demand that a determined effort should be made to square the account.

The Petrol Problem

The announcement earlier in the week that no more petrol would be available for private motorists after next month reminded citizens of this country that political neutrality affords no safeguard against economic hardship in time of war. Eire is a neutral country. She also happens to be part of a small island in the Atlantic Ocean, depending for many of her requirements on sea-borne supplies; and her lack of a mercantile marine of her own has subjected her to a general blockade which hardly could be more effective if she were a belligerent. It was obvious from the very beginning that, if the war should continue for more than a year or so, stocks of petrol and other kinds of oil would be affected; and when almost fifteen months ago the official guillotine fell upon supplies for private motorists, nobody was very much surprised. The sudden stoppage of petrol allowances last Christmas twelvemonths was a precautionary measure, and after some little time the Government decided to grant a small monthly allowance to private owners, which has enabled a reasonably large number of motorists to keep their cars on the road during the last year. Now that concession is about to be withdrawn, not because the Irish Government has been cursed with a double dose of original sin, but simply and solely because every drop of petrol that can be obtained will be needed—and needed urgently—for purposes of national defence and of public transport. After all, private car-owners in Great Britain already have been informed officially that their motoring days are numbered; and, when one takes into consideration the vast resources of the British Empire, one only can wonder that the Irish motorist has been able to survive for so long.

The stoppage of private motoring in Eire will have many consequences. One need not waste sympathy on the average owner, who uses his car mainly for pleasure. He managed to live fairly comfortably before motor cars were invented, and he probably will gain in health what he will lose in luxury by the rediscovery of the use of his legs. There are, however, other aspects of the case which cannot be dismissed so easily. In the first place, the general taxpayer probably will be required to recoup the national exchequer for the loss of revenue involved in the disappearance of private motor cars from the roads. In the next place, there is bound to be a certain amount of unemployment. The motor industry, in one way and another, gives lucrative work to a large number of Irish citizens throughout the country, and the stoppage of petrol supplies will deprive many of them of their means of livelihood. Then there is the problem of racing. One of Ireland's most profitable industries is the raising of thoroughbred horses. In order that this industry shall survive the war it is essential that Irish race meetings shall be continued, and that they shall receive the maximum amount of financial support from the general public. The British, who are at war, already have imposed drastic restrictions on the number and the frequency of race meetings in England; and we announced yesterday that the Irish Department of Industry and Commerce was engaged in negotiations with the racing authorities with a view to the curtailment and centralisation of race meetings in this country. We learn that "the discussions are proceeding," but we hope that everything possible will be done to keep Irish racing alive. The industry is certain to suffer in consequence of the stoppage of private petrol supplies; for race meetings depend on public support, and, deprived of their motor cars, patrons will be tempted to stay at home. We recognise to the full the difficulties with which the Government is confronted; but the horse-breeding industry occupies a peculiarly important position in this country, and it would, indeed, be an anomaly if one of the results of the petrol shortage should prove to be a serious injury to the cult of the horse.

WORK OF MENDICITY INSTITUTION

Almost 156,000 meals—11,879 more than in the previous year—were served in the Mendicity Institution, Dublin, last year to hungry people. Men received 135,009 of them, women 19,406, and children 1,500, and they consisted of porridge and milk for breakfast, and beef, mutton, vegetables and potatoes for dinner. Served at the rate of over 3,000 per week, these free meals accounted for 4,590 loaves, over five tons of oatmeal, 3,249 gallons of milk, 9,291 lbs. of beef, nearly 17 tons of potatoes, over four cwt. of flour, 65 lbs. of bovril, 292 lbs. of Bisto, and 364 lbs. of bacon. The gifts received by the Institution were: 1,296 gallons of milk, two halves of venison, one ton and a sack of potatoes, and a sack of vegetables.

There was an appreciable increase in the subscriptions last year, but, in view of the record number of meals supplied and the increased cost of commodities, the committee now appeals for greater help. The 124th annual report of the committee will be presented to the annual meeting of the Institution next Wednesday.

MISSIONARY SUNDAY

To-morrow will be observed as Missionary Sunday in all the Methodist churches of Dublin, the special preachers including the Rev. G. Hickman Johnson (London), one of the secretaries of the Missionary Society; the Rev. George Kell, chairman of the Mysore district, India, and the Rev. E. J. Griffin, of British Guiana. A Young People's Missionary Meeting will be held in the Centenary Church, St. Stephen's Green, this evening. On Monday evening, in the same church, the annual meeting of the Irish Auxiliary to the Methodist Missionary Society will be held.

LONDON LETTER

59 FLEET STREET, LONDON,
FRIDAY NIGHT.

MISS CLARE SHERIDAN, the Irish sculptress and painter, who is a first cousin of Mr. Churchill and of Mr. Shane Leslie, spent the summer of 1937 sculpting Red Indians in their blood reservation in the Rockies and in Montana, and news was received in London to-day of the death, at the age of 94, of the last hereditary chieftain of the Blackfoot Indians, Mountain Chief, who was the inspiration of one of her most delightful studies. As a child of seven, Mountain Chief stood by while his father signed a treaty ceding to the United States all the Blackfoot land south of the Missouri. Eleven years later, as a youth of eighteen, he led a Blackfoot war party that met combined forces of the Gros Ventres and crow Indians, and drove them into the Cypress Hills. Tribal wars followed, and it was not until sixteen years later that peace came to the plains. Mountain Chief's most renowned feat was wrestling with a grizzly bear, and emerging as victor. He wore the animal's claws as a necklace. His fame as a buffalo-hunter was so great that the disappearance of the herds was attributed to him alone.

Francis du Pont

The armament industry has lost its outstanding figure by the death, at 65, of Mr. Francis du Pont, of E. I. du Pont de Nemours and Co., the great American armaments combine, which was founded by Pierre Samuel du Pont de Nemours, the French economist and statesman, who escaped the guillotine during the French Revolution. At the United States Senate armaments inquiry eight years ago, when Francis du Pont was closely cross-examined, it was revealed that his corporation made a profit of £25,000,000 during the last war, of which amount £3,400,000 was paid out in bonuses to their employés. Francis declared that the Allies went to his firm, as they were the only company which could provide powder. "We had to expand tremendously to make it," was his explanation, "and high prices naturally resulted." The du Ponts have interest in the capital of more than twenty companies, their largest holding outside the family concern being a block of shares in General Motors, valued at thirty millions.

Conscription of Wives

Mothers whose children are evacuated or at boarding schools are to be regarded as "childless" for the purpose of Mr. Bevin's conscription plan for the war factories, it was announced to-day. Childless wives, if with comparatively light domestic responsibilities, will also be drafted to local factories. Even the wives of men in the fighting services are now to be called upon if they come under any of these categories. Women of 41 will be registering early next month. The aim of the Ministry of Labour is to find a sufficient number of childless wives to release unmarried women for urgent war jobs in distant parts of the country.

Barley Profits

Malting barley growers in Britain are to get a maximum of £7 a quarter for their 1942 crop, with seed prices remaining free. Prices up to £16 a quarter have been paid in recent weeks for the present crop, and in one case, quoted to-day, a thirty-acre field, easily the poorest on this particular farm, produced £1,945 worth of malting barley, or nearly £65 an acre. The yield was 382 sacks, and the baled straw fetched £52. The price of the grain rose steadily as it was sold—the first lot sold for £6 10s. and the last (for seed) £16. Had the controlled price been fixed last September the return would have been £600 less.

"Marco Polo"

Chinese Emperors, magicians, poets, maidens, and a Scotsman, all talking with an Irish brogue, will be an interesting feature in the adaptation of Donn Byrne's novel, which is to be broadcast by the B.B.C. on Friday week. The play does not deal with an historical account of Marco Polo's wanderings in China, but is a love story, told by Malachi, an old Irishman, who relates how young Marco left his beloved Venice for distant China to preach the gospel of Christianity, but deep down in his heart he knew that it was the longing to see the lovely Chinese maiden, Golden Bells, which caused him to make the journey. Most of the characters are Irish actors, but the name-part will be played by James McKechnie, a Scottish member of the B.B.C. repertory company. The part of Golden Bells is played by Michaeline Patton, most of whose acting has been on the Dublin stage. Others in the cast include Tony Quinn, Harry Hutchinson, Eugene Leahy, and Leslie French.

AN IRISHMAN'S DIARY

National Defence Week

Dr. A. J. Stanley, to whom I have referred more than once in these notes, author (under the name of "Fergus Buckley") of that diverting comedy, "Troubled Bachelors," is, I believe, responsible for writing and producing the ambitious historical tableaux in Mullingar's National Defence Week revue, which begins to-morrow.

The revue is but one item in what will undoubtedly be the biggest recruiting drive inaugurated outside of the capital.

The tableaux (about which the participants, incidentally, are very enthusiastic, and about whose warm reception they express themselves confident) begin with the battle eve of the Brigade, progress through the epic moments of 1916 and 1921 to the present "emergency," which has brought so many Irishmen once more to the colours.

An impressive contribution to this great military pageant should be the vocal efforts of a massed choir from the combined Defence Services, led by No. 4 Army Band.

Harness

Once upon a time working horses were bedizened with much ornament. A set of harness was mounted either in brass or silver. Usually the cart horse carried on in brass-mounted harness, while the beast who trotted between the shafts of the car, the carriage or trap sported silver.

Now I find great store is being set upon the brass pieces which formerly set off the equipment of the cart horse. They are being acquired by collectors, who hang them around their study walls. The really antique harness brass is artistically wrought, and in some cases features the initials of the owner.

Formerly people concentrated upon the collection of spurs. These were usually of silver, and curious design and antiquity, but they are not often found upon the market nowadays.

Telephone Books

It is not so many months since the new telephone directory appeared, and yet three times within the past week I have entered public telephone booths with the highest of hopes, only to emerge a few moments later frustrated, as a result of some deficiency in the telephone directory.

In one case the page which contained the number I required was missing, presumably because somebody with a bad memory had reason to ring the same number or a number in close proximity to it; in another case the whole section devoted to the letter "a" had been torn out en masse, presumably by somebody who required an address and had not sufficient time to search for it; and in the third case the whole book was missing.

It is, I know, very difficult to keep a watch on all the public telephone booths, but it is nearly time that the un-civil-minded people of this city realised that the destruction of telephone directories works both ways, and while the removal of one page may facilitate them for the moment, it would prove a decided disadvantage if they should want to use the same public booth again some days later.

McMaster and MacLiammoir

It was somewhat of a surprise to me to find the other day that Anew McMaster and Micheal MacLiammoir are not only very old friends and associates, but also brothers-in-law. They certainly form the "Royal Family" of the Irish theatre—one might almost say the Barrymores of Ireland. I doubt if there is any other family who has had two of its members playing Hamlet in the same country at the same time. And, in keeping with the tradition, I believe that Christopher McMaster, Anew's young son, has already won his spurs on the stage and wireless in London as a child actor, and is now beginning his first juvenile parts in his father's company.

MacLiammoir and McMaster have always been closely associated in the theatre as well as outside it; for it was as a member of McMaster's company that Micheal first came touring in Ireland, and it was as a guest of the Edwards-MacLiammoir company that Anew toured in Egypt and Cairo several years ago. It is many years since McMaster has been seen at the Gaiety Theatre, although the Gate audience will remember his performances of Shakespeare at that theatre last year.

His appearance in Emlyn Williams' play next week is something in the nature of a surprise for theatre-goers, as it is the first time that this famous classical actor has been seen in Dublin in a modern rôle.

TWO FIFTH-CENTURY PATRICKS

IRISH CHRISTIANITY'S DEBT TO BRITAIN

A great deal of evidence in support of his statement that two missionary bishops named Patrick came to Ireland in the fifth century was given by Professor T. F. O'Rahilly in Trinity College, yesterday. He was lecturing under the auspices of the School of Celtic Studies, Dublin Institute of Advanced Studies.

Patricius Palladius, said Professor O'Rahilly, came to Ireland in 431 as Bishop of Irish Christians who had already been converted by British missionaries. Palladius died in 461, while his successor, the later Patricius, died in 492. The birthplace of this Patrick was, perhaps, Glastonbury, Somersetshire, which had claimed to be connected with him.

Irish Christianity owed its origin to Britain, the Christian Irish to whom Palladius was sent as bishop having been converted by British missionaries. During the period of Palladius's mission (431-461) the Irish Church was in close contact with the Continent; but afterwards British influence again became supreme, so much so that in the seventh century the Irish Church was at one with the British in its method of calculating Easter and in its form of tonsure.

The evidence of Latin loan-words, said Professor O'Rahilly, confirmed these views in a striking manner. In general, these loan-words showed that the missionaries who introduced them pronounced Latin in the British fashion; but not a few of the loan-words were, as their form showed, borrowed at an early period from non-British missionaries, who to a large extent preserved the classical pronunciation of Latin.

Among those present was An Taoiseach, Mr. de Valera.

THE RUSSIAN CHURCH

"In spite of historical failures, the Russian Church is still going on," said Madame Gorodezky, at yesterday's meeting of the Anglican and Eastern Churches Association in No. 5 Leinster street, Dublin. Madame Gorodezky gave a resumé of the developments in Russian Church life since the Revolution. The Russian Church, she said, was daughter to the Church of Greece, and a member of the Eastern Church. Thus, there was a feeling of unity all through the East. The Eastern Church had had a tragic history all through the years; for the East had been for centuries under the Turks, Russia had been under the Mongolian yoke, and the failures of history had not been due to the Church, but to historical conditions. Madame Gorodezki also spoke of Soviet literature.

The Dean of Christ Church Cathedral presided.

OBITUARY

MR. RENE BULL

The death took place at Blackwater, Hants., on March 14th of Mr. Rene Bull, elder son of Mr. Cornelius Bull, J.P., Ailesbury road, Dublin. Mr. Rene Bull was educated in Clongowes Wood and Paris, and then entered on art work in London. He became art representative for a British newspaper in the South African War, in which capacity he came into close touch with many of the major battles. He occupied a similar post in the Armenian and Turco-Greek War campaigns, being taken prisoner in the latter, but succeeded in making his escape. When war was being waged in the Soudan he also served in his professional capacity. In the Great War he was commissioned to the rank of lieutenant in the R.N.V.R., and later became a Major in the Royal Air Force, and was mentioned in dispatches. When the British War Office staged war scenes on land, sea and air in the Wembley Exhibition Mr. Bull was entrusted with their planning and management. He was appointed to a position in the British Air Ministry shortly after the present war broke out.

MORE Spring Wheat is essential if the Nation is to survive and now is the time to sow it.

The need for more potatoes is also great. Potatoes can be very largely used as a substitute for bread should the wheat harvest prove unfavourable. Potatoes can be grown on a wide variety of soils. Potatoes produce more food for man and beast per acre than any other crop. More early potatoes this summer will ease the bread situation before the wheat harvest is gathered.

His leg ached with

RHEUMATISM

Kruschen Brought Complete Relief in One Month

HERE is a man whose leg was so swollen and painful with rheumatism that he could not lace up his shoe. Read his grateful account of the wonderful change he owes to Kruschen :—

"Kruschen Salts has done me more good than any medicine has ever done me. My right leg has been hurting me, off and on, for the past five years. My leg was swollen, and ached all the time, but after taking Kruschen Salts for one month, I feel like a new man. It has taken all the soreness and swelling out of my leg. Before I started taking Kruschen I could not lace up my shoe, and now I can lace it up without any trouble."—G.A.P.

That glorious relief from rheumatism can come to you just as easily. The prescription is—Kruschen every morning.

Rheumatism has one primary cause—Uric Acid in the joints and muscles. Ordinary aperient salts, which act on the bowels only, can't drive out this acid. There is only one way to drive Uric Acid out of your body and that is to flush it through your kidneys.

The whole secret of Kruschen is in its double action. It acts upon the kidneys and upon the bowels at the same time, driving out the Uric Acid deposits wherever they collect, and prevents them from forming again.

Every chemist sells Kruschen in 1/9 bottles. The dose for rheumatism is half to one teaspoonful in a glass of hot water first thing every morning.

BOOKS OF THE WEEK

Mr. Belloc's Judgment

By PATRICK KAVANAGH

Elizabethan Commentary. By Hilaire Belloc. London: Cassell. Price 7/6 net.

AT the age of seventy, Mr. Belloc is more vital and youthfully provocative than any writer I know; his latest book is a most exciting adventure in history, and whether we accept the new slant at which he presents the period to our view we can all agree that he has illuminated a side of history that has too long been hid in the kindly shadows.

Mr. Belloc, as everybody knows, writes from the Catholic standpoint, and to some readers there may appear to be a taste of special pleading about it all. But readers who are wise will realise that truth is to be found in extremes, and not in the wooden mien of yes-no. What "scholars" call the middle of the road is usually the middle of the ditch. Belloc is not of those writers who raise historical towers of Babel without any directing philosophy—those whose impartiality is the impartiality of faith-in-nothing.

Common-sense

What I like best about Belloc is his common-sense about human nature. The man who understands the motives of his next-door neighbour—or even better of himself—will not be far wrong when dealing with remote historical figures. Anybody who has been—as the Americans say—around will appreciate his suggestion that a woman's (in this case, Queen Elizabeth's) temper and temperament could be due to a sexual abnormality, or, what is more to the point here—to one of those ill-fated girlhood affaires which can so complicate and warp a woman's life. Mr. Belloc has many things to say about Henry the Eighth and Queen Elizabeth that one does not expect to find in the films dealing with these personages. One must be careful, however, of this stripping bare of old sores. Under the guise of social or moral improvement we often have revelations of disease, and these revealers are suspect. However, we can nearly always tell the sincere critic. As a rule, the best remedy for a social sore is the ointment of silence which true friends use in public, though they may use the probe in private. This applies only to a living and fundamentally healthy organism where there are pathogenic bacteria liable to infect the surrounding tissue—morally speaking.

It can be said for Belloc and Catholic apologists in general that they have never tried to deny the corruption of the clerical life in pre-Reformation England. But Belloc may be driving the horse a little too hard when he claims that there was no popular swing in favour of the new religion. One can understand the unpopularity of feudal religious orders, whose members were often a pack of scoundrels—in the job as a job and with no vocation save the vocation to rob and rape with impunity.

According to Belloc, three things were mainly responsible for the Reformation:—

(1) The Abbey lands, whose rental comprised between one-third and one-fifth of the total rentals of England. The seizure of these lands by the Crown was the first fruits of the revolt and what it fed on after.

(2) A rather dull book called "The Institute." Author, John Calvin.

(3) An unimaginative statesman, who was adviser to Queen Elizabeth and her Secretary of State. His name was William Cecil.

The Renaissance

Mr. Belloc, I am glad to see, points out that the Renaissance was the corrupt forerunner of the Reformation. We hear such a lot of talk about the artistic glory of the Renaissance as contrasted with the narrowness and vulgarity of the present-day Catholicism. There is something (not much) to be said for vulgar virtue—provided it remains at a comfortable distance.

Belloc has a good word for Bunyan, who, with — surprisingly enough — Wordsworth, he claims are the most truly Calvinistic representatives of literary England.

He suggests that Puritanism is still a rising tide. "It has one enemy which combats it continually, and that enemy is the Catholic philosophy whereof the protagonists and disseminators are the Irish people throughout the world of English speech." That is a very flattering remark; it is the remark of an idealist, speaking from a distance, who has no practical experience of us. I hope he is right, but, knowing the weakness of emotional piety unbacked by thought, I am afraid.

Puritanism

Puritanism "is not declining in strength, it is gaining in strength. If you would have yet another proof of this you can see it in the obvious fact that those very men among our contemporaries who most sincerely boast of their own exemption from the old Puritan limitations are most thoroughly bound by those limitations; for in their struggle against nature and joy they postulate the excellence of such a struggle." How true that is of liberal, leftish, anti-censorship activities in this country, for, as Belloc cleverly says: "The parent philosophy is the enemy of the child."

There is not a page of "Elizabethan Commentary" that is not a challenge. This is a book which nobody who is interested in literature, life of the most fascinating period of English history can afford to miss.

The Life of a Racing Journalist

Good Days. By Meyrick Good. London: Hutchinson. 12/6 net.

IF he had to live again the forty years that he has spent in close association with the Turf, Mr. Good would not wish for a more pleasant or varied career than he has had as a racing journalist. It would, he writes, be hard to imagine a better or more congenial life. He had, however, some advantages not enjoyed by the majority of racing journalists.

He was, as he says, "bred to horses." He was a grandson of the trainer, William Day, of Woodyates. He was a cousin of the great jockey, Mornington Cannon. He was related to several racing people of importance, and he was able to enjoy the luxury of owing racehorses, among them the useful Knight's Orb. As a result of all this he can write about the Turf with a most intimate knowledge.

His book is an interesting pot-pourri of recollections, spiced with many bright pieces, but suffering from an absence of studied arrangement and rather slovenly English in places. In view of the lack of chronological order, "Good Days" might usefully have been supplemented by an index.

Probably the best part of the book is that relating to Mr. Good's early journalistic experiences and to the racing journalists of his acquaintance. Another chapter which may fascinate many racegoers is that dealing with Mr. Charles Hannam, "the prince of gamblers." An instance of the book's unreasonable arrangement is that another chapter classes Mr. Joe Owens as "the prince of gamblers." It is a pity that such excellent material had not been more carefully presented.

A Kickham Anthology

BY SEAN O FAOLAIN

The Valley Near Slievenamon. Edited by James Maher. 10/6 net.

IF this anthology of the writings of C. J. Kickham was to be compiled at all I suppose it had to be done, as Mr. Maher has done it, with an uncritical devotion. Otherwise it is hard to know how little would have survived; as it is, the book has the considerable merit of as much completeness as patience and loyal affection could possibly achieve, and from that superabundance the equally patient will extract some interest and many minutiae of value. One must not, therefore, grumble at the arrangement or the production—even though it is guilty of every literary and typographical solecism known to man. It has more print on the cover than on the jacket. The name of the publisher, if any, is absent. There is no index. Some pages carry running titles; some not. The pagination is here on the right hand corner of the page, there in the middle. The ornaments are of a wondrous variety (happily) in keeping with the period—harps, shamrocks, round towers and classical cuts half the size of a page. And so on. For all that Mr. Maher's single-minded devotion is strong enough to cover a multitude of sins.

Verse

Here we have all Kickham's known verses—excepting "She Lived Beside the Anner" it is impossible to speak of his "poems"; many unpublished letters, including a catch from Pentonville and Woking Jails; addresses and essays not otherwise easily available; what is described on the title page as a Diary, but which is actually a few "Leaves from a Journal" intended for publication; and a host of notes, appreciations, annotations, impressions, recollections and the like—many of them trifling—by people who knew or admired Kickham, ranging from John Devoy to Yeats, John O'Leary to William O'Brien. The editor is well justified in saying that these various items "afford a little panorama of Irish history." He is modest. The historian of Fenianism must possess the book; the character of Kickham emerges; and there are many sidelights well worth noting.

It is clear from a search of this book that we must classify Kickham as a representative example of rather ineffectual Young Ireland idealism. That, one fancies, is how Turgenev would have seen him. A lyric Bazarov. He was born in 1828, and he gives a most graphic account in his Recollections of his part in Smith O'Brien's crazy "Rising" in '48. O'Brien, he says, came to Mullinahone "like a man in a dream." Young Kickham rang the church bell. Three men swelled in as many hours to six thousand—armed, poor devils, with pikes hammered then and there in the forges from Swedish iron and chance lumps of steel. The men wanted to fell trees for barricades, but O'Brien said that they must only do that if they got the permission of the owners of the estates on which the trees grew. A gentlemanly rebellion, indeed!

The Rising

One poor Protestant gentleman did give permission, but he ruefully remarked that the trees on the other side of the road on the estate of a magistrate were spared. The "boys" took the point, and cut only a few of the polite gentleman's less valuable trees. Then the army began to melt—there being nothing to do. It never even occurred to them to take the police barrack. There was only one spot of excitement, and that was when O'Brien entered the open door of the barrack—the police had suavely and sensibly behaved as if there was no Rising in progress. A big policeman thereupon put his head out of the window and shouted: "Yerrah, sure the time isn't come yet for ye to surrender yeer arms! Can't ye wait until the right time comes?" The crowd of rebels laughed cheerfully, and O'Brien and Dillon got on a side-car and drove off, smoking cigars, to have their toy rebellion at Ballingarry.

Undisillusioned by this fiasco, Kickham was a keen participant in the later Fenian movement, headed by James Stephens. He was arrested with Stephens in '65, tried at Green Street Courthouse in '66, and sentenced to fifteen years' penal servitude for an article! The letters in this volume are unrevealing of his life in jail—the prison censor saw to that. But it was a bitter and shameful experience. Rossa gives (here) a humiliating picture of the treatment the gentle fellow received. Public opinion was informed, and after three years he was released. He says himself that he would have died otherwise. Afterwards he evidently saw through Stephens, but was too loyal to criticise him. He did say bitterly that "the organisation was built on lies." One could write a lovely novel about such a life.

An Extremist

For all that, he remained an extremist—one of those idealistic extremists who would achieve their ends only by the noblest means. Parliamentarianism he despised. He was Chairman of the reorganised Irish Republican Brotherhood for several years before he died (so says John Devoy in this book), although he was virtually deaf and almost blind since boyhood, and all his fellow-conspirators had to talk to him with their fingers. That disgust with constitutional methods dated from the old antagonism between the Davis-Mitchel-Duffy group and the declining O'Connell. He saw the Liberator in Thurles and paid his hard-won half-guinea to attend the banquet that night. These banquets were then the order of the day, and Kickham's description of this one gives us a heartbreaking picture of this poor rising Irish democracy trying to behave like "gintlemen." All Kickham got at the banquet was a mutton-bone and a bit of bread (for his half-guinea). But he was too excited to care. "In fact I felt the most sovereign contempt for the patriots gobbling up soup on every side—two patriots to one plate—each seeming in mortal terror lest his competitor should get a single spoonful in advance of him." This is the sort of precious detail for which Mr. Maher's book is well worth combing.

The romantic Kickham did not, and, perhaps, naturally so, get the right perspective on that sort of thing; as when, again, he found it hard to believe John O'Donovan, the antiquary, when he quoted O'Connell's chaplain for his authority that "no man ever despised a people more than O'Connell despised the Irish people." Kickham thought that this might be just because O'Connell was angry at the people for turning away to the Young Irelanders. Whereas, of course, O'Connell did heartily despise the people (just as much as he loved them), and said so to his friend, Fitzpatrick, in a letter—"Posterity never can believe the species of animals with which I had to carry on my warfare with the common enemy." It is the realist against the sentimentalist, and gives us all a precedent for heartily reviling this beloved country of ours just as often as we feel like it. It is only the sentimentalist who is afraid to hate. But that O'Connell gave those romantic Young Irelanders a bad time one can appreciate from the query of Duffy: "Is O'Connell jealous of the Nation?" Dillon—"Jealous of the Nation? He's jealous of Brian Boru!"

It was in the tradition that Kickham should equally distrust Parnell. When Parnell was in Kilmainham he froths at the farce of his luxurious imprisonment. A lady sent in a superb eiderdown quilt with C.S.P. embroidered in gold on it, and the convict of Pentonville could hardly contain himself. After all, when he was a convict he had often to tie his handkerchief tightly around his belly to dim the ache of hunger. When Devoy and the I.R.B. wanted to co-operate with the Land League, he actually made Davitt "cry like a child" by his contemptuous intransigeance. "The thing is at best only Whiteboyism," he said of the No Rent campaign. He said that the abolition of landlordism would be "Communism, and nothing but Communism in Ireland under present circumstances." There he was, for once, in agreement with The Times (or was it The Times? That missing index!) which spoke of "Saturnalia of Communism." (Galway papers please copy.) Strange conclave it must have been in Paris, in that small hotel in the Latin Quarter near John O'Leary's lodgings, with purblind Kickham dominating them all with his fingers—he would close his fist to end a circuit of speech, and the conversation had to wait on the open palm—and, after it, Davitt bawling like a kid down the Rue de Bac on John Devoy's arm.

About Literature

There is a fair amount about literature. It is revealing when he says: "This writing for a purpose is destructive of the artistic"; and when he wishes he had "the right sort of audience," and asks sadly: "Do any cultured people read me at all?" He wrote in times far more difficult than our's in those respects. The only literary periodical was The Irish Monthly, which could not assist him greatly. He was very poor. He was robbed by pirates of much of the profit due to his pen—and felt it keenly. Some of the acidity inevitable to his hard life shows itself here and there, and his temper was often near him. Yet he was essentially "our gentle Charles," and some scenes here show that many perceived his nobility readily; of these as moving as any is Archbishop Croke's interview with him when he begged to be allowed the Sacraments, although a Fenian. To Croke's honour he granted it, and it was a pity that in the end the Archbishop was away when Kickham died, and that, thanks to that old Tory, Canon Cantwell, the doors of Thurles Cathedral were closed against his dead body. A young priest was at his grave to read the De profundis. His brother said: "Friends, place the remains in the grave and cover it with the earth of his kindred. The man that lies there was pure and stainless and a thousand priests could do no more for him."

Mr. Maher's inclusiveness has salvaged many such touches, and merits our gratitude accordingly.

Dramatis Personæ

BY DAVID ST. JOHN

The Scene is Changed. By Ashley Dukes. Macmillan. 12/6 net.

IT is difficult to know why books about the theatre are always dull. The only explanation I can think of is that it is one form of art criticising another. Music criticism appeals only to a specialised audience—although with my few gramophone records I read the monthly notes of Edward Sackville-West in the New Statesman with the utmost delight; ballet, of its very expensive nature, has always seemed to me a millionaire's playground; and art criticism, when it attempts to be literary, is little short of a contradiction in terms.

Mr. Ashley Dukes is the author of the very successful play, "The Man With a Load of Mischief"; he has written, adapted and translated many others; his wife is Marie Rambert, Mistress of the Ballet Rambert, which visited Dublin shortly before the war; he is the owner of the Mercury Theatre in Ladbroke Grove, London, and he tells anecdotes of "Willie Yeats" in an aeroplane beside him, flying to Rome without his top-hat.

Faint Praise

Far be it from me to damn with faint praise artistic enterprise; but my solitary memory of the Mercury Theatre is a Sunday night ballet performance, viewed from an expensive seat so close to the stage that one beheld the rivulets of sweat running down the bodies of the performers. Our Cork pianist, Mr. Charles Lynch, it may be interesting to note, accompanied on the piano.

Later, on the top of a 'bus I heard one of the young dancers gesticulate to his companion: "But Agnes—I always say—Agnes has movement." There was a rustle—I thought at first, of applause—but it was only every newspaper in the 'bus being lowered, in English askance.

But, leaving aside our incompatibility of mind, the "publisher's blurb" about Mr. Dukes's book says that it "is neither an autobiography nor a travel book, but something of both." Well, Mr. Dukes does touch on Salzburg, Munich, Malvern and Hollywood, but he does not tell us anything new about them, nor anything very much, so far as travel goes; and as to his life story, it is hinted that there was something in the nature of a major emotional crisis, causing him to dicker about a bit more often with aeroplanes, and skip and jump up and down platforms with less equanimity than usual—while the inside story is known to several interested parties only.

So far as Lennox Robinson is concerned, he remains "that serpentine personality," and of "Willie Yeats" all we know is that Mrs. Yeats did not think a top hat suited him. Possibly all this is of interest to theatre-addicts; but to me it is dope.

Happy World. By Mary Carbery. Longmans, Green and Co. 12/6.

"LATER on, I began, like every other child, to wonder what I am for, and how much I matter, and what praying does for me and for others. . . . When I asked Nanny if I matter she said, certainly, because I am as useful as a second nurserymaid. I matter to her, she said, and to Papa and Mama because I love them and they love me. People who love are very mattering in life. And I matter to our Heavenly Father (God) and am of more value than many sparrows. Sparrows, Gazeley says, are mischievous varmints, so I don't understand about my value. Many varmints are worse than one varmint."

I cannot review this book, I am certain, in any better manner than to quote that passage and another one. They are passages descriptive of the whole: A story of a happy Victorian childhood, when life was, or seemed, secure, and gracious; full of spiritual, as well as material, sunshine. After some recent exposées of the narrow cruelties of Victorian upbringing, it is good to know that some of the products of that age lived on such affectionate terms with their Mamas and Papas. The book reminds me of no other that I have ever read, except Siegfried Sassoon's "The Old Century." It is as beautifully, if more simply, written, and, I think, more original.

Refreshing Simplicity

How refreshing its simplicity is:

"There's nothing frightening about the Last Day," she said, "if we are good children, for we shan't be there. All good people will be taken away before it happens. How? We shall shoot up into the air."

"Oh, wait a minute, Bee. Shall we shoot up just as we are? What if we are in our baths?"

"You can grab your dressing-gown while the ceiling is cracking to let us through."

". . . Won't light people shoot up quicker than heavy ones? Mightn't little Harry be lost?"

". . . What is a trump?"

"Something that an angel blows which shatters the skulls of sinners. Every cow in the world will moo, every lion will roar, every cock will crow at the sound of the trump. Oh, the noise, the noise. . . ." Bee put her hands over her ears and looked wild.

"Is—is that all?" I asked. "If their skulls are shattered, the wicked won't mind the moos."

NEVER THE TWAIN

NEW NOVELS

The Three Blossoms of Chang-an. By Keith West. London: Cresset Press. 8/- net.

Put Out More Flags. By Evelyn Waugh. London: Chapman and Hall. 8/- net.

Music in the Park. By F. L. Green. London: Michael Joseph. 8/- net.

I HAVE never been in China, and I have never met a Chinaman, but I have very definite ideas about how I think they behave, and "The Three Blossoms of Chang-an" fulfils my ideas to the letter. It may be stage-Chinese; I do not know. But to my Western mind it is thoroughly and delightfully Oriental in spirit.

The three blossoms of the title are three wives which the ' ro in the best Eastern traditions took unto himself, and the book purports to be a translation of three antique scrolls which were discovered in an old coffin near Hongkong. The plot does not matter; it is sufficient to say that it is one which gives the author ample opportunity for humour and irony.

Keith West's style is as difficult to describe as Michael Zoshschenko's: once again I had better quote a couple of sentences:—

"You write poetry?" asked Sung.

"It is an impertinence to suggest that you do not."

"Confucius seldom refers to domestic details, but I feel that a little tragedy stood behind his pen when he wrote: Women and servants are difficult to manage—they presume on kindness and resent authority. Perhaps a spoiled breakfast who knows?"

There are many phrases and ideas in the book reminiscent of Lin Yutan, but perhaps that is merely because the Western mind can see as little difference between one Chinese book and another as the Western eye can see between one Chinese face and another.

It is a pity the author has not got a more Oriental name.

SINCE the outbreak of war the "smart set" in England seems to have faded into insignificance; but Mayfair is at war just as much as Camden town, and the effect is quite as devastating to the Hon. Miss Agatha Runcible as it is to plain Lizzy Smith.

Evelyn Waugh, true to his colours in more senses than one, shows us a cross-section of the idle rich at war. Many old familiar characters are there, and the new acquaintances include Basil Seale, who becomes a self-appointed billeting officer and makes quite an appreciable income by carting an impossible family of East End evacuees from house to house and agreeing to take them elsewhere only on payment of an immense bribe; Ambrose something or another, who enters the War Office and causes much official embarrassment by adorning his room with statues (objects, art, of, for offices, decoration of, the), which did not figure in any of the Civil Service lists; and "The Colonel," a War Office lion, who was more interested in Susie, his A.T.S. aide-de-camp, than in a Divine Plan—conceived by Basil Seale—for defeating the Germans in North Africa.

It is the funniest thing that has been written about the war effort up to the present, and it is not without its moral. With Evelyn Waugh humour is rarely an end in itself.

TREASONS, stratagems and spoils are all the rage in England at the present time.

Mr. F. L. Green's new book deals with the shady exploits of an amateur photographer, who spends his time trying to get within photographic range of some mysterious war machine and within proposal range of some young woman.

"Music in the Park" is an ideal title for the book; it is about as banal as the average Sunday-afternoon band concert in the average public park, and it probably will prove just as popular.

Windswept (by Mary Ellen Chase) is a quietly impressive novel about a family of happy people. In this respect it is unusual at any rate. The scene is set in Eastern Maine, an open, barren track of land, facing the sea. Solid. Collins. 9/6 net.)

Columbus (by Rafael Sabatini) is a very graphic novel based on the life of the illustrious discoverer of America. It is interesting, and, in a sense, instructive, but its cheap, colourful and badly-executed dust-jacket makes it look like a cheap novelette.

The Work of S. H. Grimm

Samuel Hieronymus Grimm. By Rotha Mary Clay. London: Faber and Faber. 25/- net.

SAMUEL HIERONYMUS GRIMM—not to be confused with either of the brothers Grimm, writers of the famous fairy tales—is the subject of Faber and Faber's latest Art book. It is a beautiful production, printed on excellent paper, which would be better than average even in normal times, and amply and wonderfully illustrated with exampes of Grimm's work.

S. Hieronymus Grimm was an eighteenth century Swiss painter and poet, and his paintings—in oil and aquarelle—have a certain charm, apart from their historical interest, as illustrations of works of the period. Grimm spent a large part of his life in Britain, and one whole section of the book is devoted to paintings of the English landscape. The comments by Rotha Mary Clay, as well as the brief outline of his career, serve to heighten one's appreciation of the painter.

The book is a highly creditable production, but one whose publication might well have been postponed until after the war, in view of the severe paper shortage.

MISSING BICYCLES

In the Dublin District Court, before Senior Justice Hannan, Michael Corcoran (24), labourer, 51 North Great George's street, Dublin, was remanded on charges of having stolen six bicycles over a period extending from December 5, 1941, up to February 19, 1942. Five of the bicycles were taken from outside Catholic Churches in various parts of Dublin, and one from outside the Dublin Savings Bank, Lower Abbey street. Four belonged to women, and one was the property of a Civic Guard. They varied in value from £2 to £8. Corcoran was remanded in custody until Friday.

GIRL SENT TO JAIL

A young Cork girl, Kathleen Barkley, charged with being drunk and disorderly, was sentenced to 14 days' hard labour by District Justice Hannan in the Dublin District Court. A fortnight ago she and another girl were found with linked arms at midnight, drunk and singing in O'Connell street, Dublin.

Barkley said she was prepared to go into a home, but not into a convent.

The other girl had been placed on probation.
